

Working with WordPress (part two)

This week I continued working on my Portfolio website, and followed the instructions in this weeks lesson.

- Permalinks
- Display tags under posts
- Add avatars under comments
- Read the Codex
- Create test blog

Displaying tags under the posts was already a part of my theme, I found. All the others I have worked on. "Reading the Codex" is no small task, let me tell you that. I don't think that one ever can sign off that one completely, but that's okay. We are here to learn!

Getting to know WordPress is a huge job, and I am thankful for these assignments letting us get there, (not so) slowly but surely.

Did a million little things. Deleted unused themes, updated everything that needed to be updated, watched the updated LinkedIn Videos of Morten Rand-Hendriksen (amongst others) and so on. Simply spent a lot of time getting to know WordPress.

Examples:

I added a few quotes to the "about the designer" page, to break up the text and make it more visually stimulating. Also added a picture of myself.
